

SIMPLE LIFE LED BY DEMOCRACY'S MAN FOR VICE PRESIDENT AND HIS CHARMING WIFE

MR. AND MRS. T. R. MARSHALL AND THEIR HOME

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., August 7.—Governor Thomas R. Marshall, the Democratic nominee for vice president, and Mrs. Marshall are an ideally happy pair. They have no children, are devoted to each other and live as quietly as his public life permits in a modest home. Governor Marshall was born in Indiana and never has lived outside the state. The same is true of Mrs. Marshall. The governorship of the state was his first political office. Governor Marshall's father was a nephew of the late Chief Justice Marshall.

TROLLEY RULES FOR RIDERS

The question as to what rules the traction companies shall make for the government for trolley riders, or what rules public utilities commissions shall make for the government of traction companies, or what rules the trolley rider shall observe or ignore, or evade, or defy, is not local at all, says the Christian Science Monitor editorially. It is a question common to the whole country. There is scarcely a community in the land, urban or suburban, that has not had it up for discussion at one time or another, that will not have it up for discussion again, sooner or later. The only way to treat it here, therefore, is to treat it generally. Or, to put it in another way, the only way it can be handled here at present is by taking for a text what may be called a composite case.

A man jumped on an open trolley car, found that all seats were occupied and decide to ride on the running board. The rules of the public utilities commission require that the trolley company shall provide a seat for every fare. The passenger in question waives his right to a seat, and is content where he is. The conductor, however, remembers that there is a rule of the company which says no person shall be allowed to ride on the running board. He has seen thousands of persons riding on the running board, but he decides that it is his duty not to permit this particular passenger to do so. Consequently he tells the passenger on the running board that he must get inside the car. The passenger on the running board consents to do so on condition that the conductor shall find him a seat, as the rules of the public utilities commission require. The conductor finds that there is no seat available, but insists that the passenger on the running board shall get into the car nevertheless.

The passenger on the running board declares that it is the duty of the traction company to provide him with a seat and that until it does so he will continue to ride on the running board. The conductor is tempted to stop the car and put the man on the running board off, but he remembers that the man has paid his fare, paid for his seat, is entitled to the ride, and that the law makes it very unpleasant for the traction company that is not considerate, under such circumstances, of the traction patron, and so he does not yield to the temptation. But he calls a policeman and has the man on the running board arrested on a technical charge of a breach of the peace. When the case comes up in court the man who persisted in riding on the running board is discharged at once and the conductor and the company that employs him are reprimanded.

Now there are parts of the country where the man on the running board would have committed a still more serious offense—against commission and corporation rules had he attempted to stand in the open car between the seats. It is unnecessary to say that there are parts of the country where it is perfectly proper for a man not only to ride on the running board but to ride on the steps, to cling to the door bar, to ride on the coupling, to hang on the brake, to grip the roof with his hands and a roof-top with his feet. There are rules against all these, but that does not matter. What seems to be lacking is an understanding. The average man does not care much whether he is clinging to a strap or clinging to another, and an inner passenger on the running board. What he does want is that so long as he is content and comparatively happy he shall be let alone.

ASKS DELEGATES INSTRUCTED FOR HIM

Statement from Kuhio Given Out on Hawaii Urges Renomination

Delegate Kuhio is making his plans for getting delegates to the Territorial convention instructed for his renomination, according to a statement given out on Hawaii as coming from the prince here. The statement says:

"I feel it not improper that I should by this means make a personal appeal to you for your support of my candidacy for the Republican nomination for delegate to Congress, and to ask that you assist in every proper way in the selection of delegates to the coming Republican Territorial convention. This method of doing so is made necessary partly by my inability to see you personally, and partly by the fact that the two leading newspapers of Honolulu, being opposed to my nomination, will in all probability oppose me daily, and probably say some things which are liable to misconstruction.

"A certain element of the Republican party, assuming unto themselves the right to represent all of the business interests of the Territory of Hawaii, has, because of my answer to a letter written me, passed out the word that the business interests of the Territory of Hawaii, that the business interests as a whole are opposed to me, and that I must not be nominated. Through out the entire discussion by these 'business men' has appeared, by innuendo and insinuation, the veiled threat that unless the Republican party shall yield, and place in nomination the man they want, they will withhold all contributions from the Republican committees in the coming campaign. They predict freely that no one who is not endorsed by them can get elected, because he cannot get the funds to carry on the campaign. In short, the intimidation by these so-called 'business men' is that the electorate of the Hawaiian Islands can be handled only by the use of money.

"While it is true that I am opposed to the methods employed to prevent people who are not 'business men' from securing a portion of the public lands under the homestead acts, and will continue with all the powers I have to oppose the methods, yet it is not true, in the broad sense of the term, that I am opposed to the business interests of the Territory. I believe they should be given proper consideration and representation. I do not believe, however, that their interests are paramount. The great majority of the electorate of the islands are not business men. Their wants and wishes are entitled to as much consideration as though they were men of great wealth and high standing in the business world.

"That I have taken the stand on this question that I have is responsible for the action of that faction in Honolulu which has declared me no longer worthy to be delegate in Congress. Apparently forgetting that for a number of years I have represented the Territory in Congress, and that through my effort nearly all the wishes put forward by the people of Hawaii have been granted by Congress, they insist that my refusal to wholly surrender to their wishes constitutes a good reason for my defeat.

"If you are in sympathy with the stand I have taken, and believe that I can properly represent you in Congress, will you not endeavor to see that no delegate is chosen to the Republican Territorial convention who is not pledged to support me for the nomination. As a matter of fact, if the majority of the voters of your precinct are in favor of my renomination, you would have the right to instruct your delegates to vote for me, and should this be done, no one, I take it, would dare violate his instructions.

"Trusting that you are willing to comply with my request, and thanking you in advance, I am, very sincerely,

TAFT FAVORS NEGRO SOLDIERS DISCHARGED IN BROWNSVILLE RIOT

Executive Order Makes Former Infantryman Messenger in Civil Service

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 3.—By an executive order of President Taft, Mingo Sanders, who was a sergeant in one of the colored infantry companies, discharged without honor from the army for participation in the Brownsville riots, became a messenger in the classified service today and went to work for the interior department.

Representative Rodenberg of Illinois said today he would introduce in the House next week a bill to reinstate Sanders in the army and permit his retirement at once. When discharged Sanders had served 26 years and after another year's service would have been entitled to retirement at two-thirds pay and allowance. Rodenberg says he will later introduce a bill for the reinstatement of all the innocent soldiers discharged for participation in the Brownsville riots.

QUEEN BARS LOTHARIOS FROM COURT FUNCTIONS

Equal Standards of Morality Demanded From Both Sexes

LONDON, Aug. 3.—Steadily the influence of the Queen is extending into every item of court doing. The latest manifestation of her activity is not at all palatable to many a gay west ender.

Early in the new regime at Buckingham palace it was seen that there was no room for merry widows and too giddy society butterflies. In a few cases where the woman with a hectic record of accomplishments, on the record of romantic adventure has had marriageable daughters with you, and sweetness on their side, the queen has relented so far as to allow the mother to chaperone them at one or two functions. But directly the girls marry the mother is barred.

Now the men are being submitted to the same rigorous tests. The Buckingham palace invitation list is being pruned perpetually. When a scandalous story about some gay Lothario of society reaches the ear of Queen Mary, the makes inquiries and, if the rumors are well founded, she blue pencils the name in the invitation list and the erring votary of Cupid is known no more in the court set.

Her majesty strongly dissents from the view that has hitherto condemned women for lapses while overlooking similar masculine errors. Both must pay the penalty of disfavor for straying from the narrow path from now on. King George, like a model husband, entirely agrees with his wife on this rendering of the equality of the sexes.
